New River White

Type	Granite
Finish	Polished
Color family	White
Origin	South India
Sealing	Confirm requirements for the selected stone

New River White is a granite quarried in southern India, a region renowned for white-and-grey speckled stone. Geologically a fine-to-medium-grained granulite/granite of quartz, feldspar and mica from the Precambrian period, it shows an alabaster-white base with stormy silver-grey swirls and occasional deep-burgundy garnet speckles. The 'River White' name evokes the flowing, water-like grey movement across the slab.

CARE & INSTALLATION

Clean with warm water and a stone-safe cleaner; wipe spills promptly and use trivets. Sealing needs depend on the selected stone and its use; confirm the care schedule with us. Slab movement and tone vary from swatches. Confirm the actual slab, finish and thickness before fabrication.
